ORRJHS Gives Thanks with Tri-Town Seniors

By Jean Perry

Sunday's rainstorm left some of us wondering if it would be worth it to leave the house and go anywhere at all; the senior citizens of the Tri-Town, however, know what they would have been missing out on if they didn't make it to the Old Rochester Regional Junior High Thanksgiving Senior Banquet – the downpour of gravy over turkey, stuffing, and mashed potatoes that they didn't have to cook themselves and with no post-feast cleanup.

It's up to the ORR Junior High staff volunteers to do the cooking and the student volunteers to do the serving and table clearing while the school community showers its guests of honor with thanks for its support.

Students met the guests outside the entrance to escort them inside as swiftly as possible while keeping them as dry as possible, even as the worst of the rainfall fell just as it was time to arrive. The students managed its small fleet of wheelchairs for the long trip from the parking lot and down the long school hallway to the cafeteria – a path that would otherwise seem a little like a maze if not for the mouthwatering aroma of a turkey feast to draw one in the right direction.

Tables were arranged with seasonal centerpieces and silverware and each guest was personally accompanied inside by smiling students eager for the moment to come when the kitchen doors would be flung open and the mad turkey dash could begin.

Superintendent Doug White made his usual rounds going table to table to chat with the senior population of the regional school district, except this would be his last Thanksgiving banquet, as White will retire at the end of this school year.

Students spent hours preparing for the event, including the day before, setting the tables and decorating the cafeteria with banners and real pumpkins that made the space feel like a true altar for both giving and gratitude.

Error Correction

There was an error in the November 21, 2019 edition of The Wanderer in the Marion Zoning Board of Appeals article titled "Tabor Re-files for Field Lights, Asserts Dover Exemption," written by Marilou Newell.

Kate Mahoney brought to our attention that she was misattributed to a quote that she did not say that is featured on page 22 of The Wanderer; therefore we retract the mention of Ms. Mahoney's name attributed to the following quote:

"You live in your own uninformed bubble... You don't know what goes on in this town."

Mahoney was understandably concerned for being misattributed to the statement, and The Wanderer regrets the error. We apologize to Ms. Mahoney for the consternation she experienced and to our readers for any confusion that may have ensued.

1621 Thanksgiving with Chief Massasoit

By George B. Emmons

Massasoit (1590-1661) was the grand sachem intertribal chief of all the Wampanoag Indians of the coastal regions of today's Massachusetts and Rhode Island. His tribes included his own Pokanoket village of Bristol, the Sakonnet people of Rhode Island, Acushnet of New Bedford, Agawam of Mattapoissett, the Nausets of Cape Cod, and Aquinnah of the Vineyard and Nantucket. To other inland tribes, they were known as the eastern people of the rising Sun, as the first to see the light of day coming up over the horizon of the ocean.

Then the apparition of the Mayflower appeared, on wings of change that foreshadowed what would be many more colonists to come to Native American shores.

In March of 1621, several months after the landing of the Mayflower at Plymouth, Massasoit visited the new colony with an intention to ensure peaceful accord and trade between the races. He and Governor John Carver smoked a ceremonial peace pipe, as illustrated. His spoken promises were to be a treaty of peaceful accord, which lasted as long as he lived. Massasoit instructed his fellow Indians to share techniques of planting, hunting, fishing, harvesting, and cooking, as half of the Pilgrims that made the ocean journey had already died of malnutrition and exposure to the elements. Later in life, Massasoit was sent a solid silver smoking pipe from King James of England as thanks for saving his tenuous New World colony.

Equally vital for Pilgrim and Wampanoag security was Massasoit's insistence on a mutual agreement to defend each other if attacked by the nearby Narragansett. When the Pilgrims decided to celebrate a bountiful harvest of Thanksgiving, Massasoit was invited and brought 90 warriors as guests. Giving native thanks for seasonal harvest was a frequent habit by the Wampanoag. They started in spring with a strawberry festival, and then the green corn ceremony in late July. The latter was followed by a fast, after which any wrongdoings might be forgiven for those willing to repent.

Harvest of corn itself had a metaphysical spirit of sustenance from the good earth. For the Thanksgiving feast, they pounded the dried ears into a dish they called nasaump, as well as a stewed pumpkin porridge called pompion. The first Thanksgiving lasted three days and was filled with Indian song, games, and dance punctuated and blessed by Pilgrim religious prayers, as well as marching of Myles Standish's military soldiers.

Later in the winter of 1623 when Massasoit became deathly ill, colonial leader Edward Winslow traveled many miles with broth through the snow to nurse him back to health. Meanwhile, the Indian's friend, Roger Williams, who preached that all the land still belonged to the Indians, was convicted of religious heresy by the Bay Colony in Boston and sentenced to extradition back to England. Williams escaped to Rhode Island and was invited by Massasoit to spend the winter in his lodge, and in spring, Massasoit sold Williams nearby land to found the Providence Plantation of religious freedom.

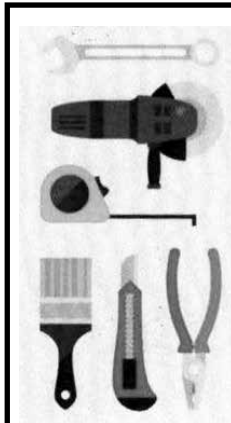

Now almost 400 years later, a new book about the Wampanoags is available in South Coast libraries, written by David Silverman and titled This Land is Their Land – the very preaching of Roger Williams.

And so, when we bow our heads at Thanksgiving, let us give thanks for the peace pipe welcome of Massasoit and the hospitality of the Wampanoag of Native America.

proverbial "why" when confronted with something she didn't quite understand, and responding "no" when achievement was denied.

"I was never a follower," said Holland. "I was very bossy. I was independent and controlling," she confessed during a talk she gave at the Mattapoisett Library on November 24 titled "The Journey to Health, Happiness, & Well-Being: Thank you, Cancer."

Holland admitted that the title might seem odd, but she explained – in sometimes explicit detail – how she found her way through the initial shock of a cancer diagnosis, to secure her health, and even found love. "Good can come from bad," she said.

Holland's life had been on a very steep upward trajectory. She admitted to being a Type-A personality, in constant competition with herself to achieve success. By the time she was 30, she had earned a doctoral degree in psychology, was a certified personal trainer, and a realtor.

"I was teaching in a university setting," said Holland. "I thought... 'this is it.'"

Holland had always taken exceptionally good care of her body, eating a diet low in saturated fats with a heavy emphasis on plants and grains. She worked out daily and, admittedly, became a bit "self-righteous" about healthy lifestyles. "But the universe was about to tell me everything wasn't alright."

Going about her daily activities, she was surprised to find a small lump deep within the side of her breast. It surprised her more than alarmed her; after all, she was healthy, had just had her annual check-up – everything was just as it should be. She ignored the first warning shot of what would become her greatest challenge.

When she noticed the lump was still there two months later, she went back to her doctor. Here, Holland cautioned women to be vigilant.

"Tumors can be very hidden," she said.

In the doctor's office, the tumor could not be found. Eventually, and with much insistence, she received immediate diagnostic imaging; an ultrasound found the tumor.

In telling this part of her journey, Holland urged all to advocate on their own behalf. She said appointments for specialized testing are available – waiting days or even weeks isn't absolutely necessary, but pushing the limits is often required.

"I told them I wasn't leaving without an immediate appointment," said Holland.

There was that ultrasound, the mandatory needle biopsy, and then the wait.

"I wasn't prepared for how things were turning out," Holland said.

Holland and her partner were in shock during those weeks as they attempted to process what was happening and what next steps to take. She said she tried to distance herself from what was happening, saying, "My body had failed me."

The follow-up appointment with the oncologist was Holland's next challenge.

"The doctor told me I wasn't going to die," said Holland, but the standard protocol wasn't one that Holland was willing to accept. "She told me that after surgery there would be 30 rounds of radiation and then five years of Tamoxifen," and possible side effects that included ovarian cancer, cervical cancer, and stroke. For her, that was unacceptable. Holland agreed to surgery but insisted on following a holistic approach thereafter.

Holland had already been using holistic methods in her health regimen. Her announcement that she was saying "No" to chemotherapy and radiation didn't sit well with the Boston medical team.

"They tried to scare me into it," she said. "[I was told] 'You will die if you don't do what we say.'" Holding steadfast in her opinion that her pathway would not be their protocol, she had the surgery and returned home.

Today, Holland is cancer-free. For her, a holistic approach to health such as massage, chiropractic treatments, and detoxing from head to toe worked for her, although she knows not everyone would select these methods. She reflected on how a cancer diagnosis can feel as though one is separated from everyone around them.

"It's the loneliest place you'll ever be," she said. "...The cancer bubble."

Even with support, she said, she still felt alone.

Throughout her cancer journey, Holland gave credit to the loving support of her "sweetheart" with whom she traveled from the dark side of the initial diagnosis to the relief of receiving blood test results that announced "no evidence of disease." His gentle presence eventually eroded her mantra of "never getting married," but, "One thing had been missing: a loving relationship," said Holland.

"The positives have outweighed the negatives," Holland concluded of her journey thus far. Today, with the belief that future blood tests will continue to confirm that her health is intact, she is sharing her experiences, but she said, "I'm not disparaging the medical community." However, with rising cancer rates, she is concerned there isn't enough being done to prevent cancer.

Ultimately, Holland's message is one of hope, regardless of the medical decisions someone may make.

"There are multiple medical choices and they are all respected, but this was my choice." In the end Holland discovered that "there is good in every bad," and to never say 'never' when love comes knocking.

'I am Autistic': The Autistic Perspective

By Jean Perry

Chuck McIntyre has terrible executive function skills. Keeping organized, remembering to do the tasks on his to-do list, and even getting started with chores like doing laundry or doing the dishes often seems as complicated to the 27-year-old Mattapoisett man as a 1,000-piece puzzle with no picture of the final result to go by. On the flip side, he can memorize quotes and facts from the sophisticated literary and non-fiction books he's read, and his astute attention to detail tells him as soon as he walks into a room if even the minutest of details has been changed.

Such is the dichotomy of autism. Stigmatized as a pervasive disability throughout history, autism in contemporary times is considered more as a type of "neuro-divergence" than a disability. Autism is a spectrum of human neuro-diversity that is best understood under the more progressive “social model” of disability – ways in which our society is organized that is the disabling factor for an individual – rather than the traditional “medical model” of disability – where the individual is disabled by their ‘impairment’ or ‘differences’.

McIntyre was diagnosed at the age of four with Pervasive Developmental Disorder (PDD) – “Which is kind of like saying ‘medium’ autism,” said McIntyre on November 20 before a diverse group assembled at the Mattapoisett Library to hear him make his presentation titled, “I Am Autistic.” His presentation placed emphasis on what it’s like to be autistic, autism as a condition, socializing and communication, mental health, and overcoming disability discrimination among other things.

Unlike some physical disabilities that are apparent to the observer, autism is less apparent, and some of the visible stereotypical emergences of autism such as repetitive body motions or the absence of verbal communication is only the proverbial tip of the iceberg of the complexity of autism that exists within the individual.

Pointing to his head, “That hides one of the most important, most mysterious organs in the body: the brain,” said McIntyre. “You can see someone is blind... or bound to a wheelchair,” he said, and perhaps one could try to experience a sliver of what life without sight or the use of one’s legs would be like. “But there’s no way I can make you understand what it's like to be autistic. I can only describe [it]..."

Chuck used his existence as a cisgender male, a male whose gender identity matches the sex he was assigned at birth, as a way to explain his point.

"I have no idea what it's like to be a woman – I will never have the hormones or the body of a woman," so everything he knows about being a woman is by talking to women and reading about the female experience, he said.

For decades, there was no consideration for the autistic perspective, no voice for a population that has historically been stigmatized, institutionalized, and marginalized. All that was known about autism was shared from the perspective of non-autistics until 43 years after the first diagnosis of "autism."

It was Dr. Temple Grandin and her book Emergence: Labeled Autistic in 1986 that began the shift of the dominant paradigm, ultimately leading to a movement of self-advocacy and civil rights. The autistic perspective of "nothing about us, without us" demands that their voice be a part of the autism conversation, which until now, had been led by 'ableist' beliefs on how autism should be 'treated', 'cured', and perceived autistics as otherwise broken and needing fixing.

McIntyre was limited to 90 minutes for his presentation on a topic that is so inherently complex and fascinating that he could only touch upon some of the aspects of autism he wants most for people to become aware of, accept, and include in society as simply a variation of the human neuro-diverse experience. In fact, as McIntyre put it, he would need the equivalent of three Victor Hugo novels to give non-autistics a comprehensive education on autism and the autistic experience. (For the non-English major, Hugo's novels are some of the longest ever written.)

"The [autism] spectrum is not a straight line," said McIntyre. "Each individual is very similar – we all have things in common, just like women have things in common," he said, returning to his original analogy. For McIntyre, he acknowledges his "slightly above-average" vocabulary usage and his skill of articulating his ideas.

"But I may never be able to drive," he said. ("And that's because the people in this state drive horrible and I can't think ahead enough to predict everything they're going to do and my anxiety flares up").

Autism is not something you grow out of, said McIntyre. "I will always be autistic." And there is nothing here to cure, he said. "A cure is paradoxical. There is no Chuck McIntyre without autism." The most famous autistics throughout history: Einstein, Mozart, Newton, Michelangelo, to name a few; are these people who needed to be 'cured'?

Holding up one of his recent paintings featuring small representations of some of the brilliant autistic minds past and present, McIntyre said, "None of these

Marion Family Chiropractic's Guide to Thanksgiving Spine Survival

Avoid bending directly over the oven door to lift the turkey. Pull the oven rack out, crouch and use your legs and knees to avoid stress on your low back. Also, have a space ready to put the bird, so you're not awkwardly balancing your 25 pound main attraction while clearing space for it.

When preparing food or washing mountains of dishes, put one foot up on a small step stool. Switch feet occasionally. You can also open a cabinet door and put a foot on the ledge to accomplish the same thing. This puts less stress on your spine while you're standing.

If you're going for a long drive to visit friends and relatives this Thanksgiving, make sure to take a break from driving and get out of your vehicle to stretch. This helps restore normal posture.

The same is true for watching hours of after-dinner football. Get up during commercials and move.

When loading your car for a trip (or from the grocery store), make your bags smaller, lighter loads

Make sure your children have a head rest or a child-sized neck pillow so they don't strain their necks falling asleep in the car. Without support, your child's head can flop forward and sideways which affects their breathing and misaligns vertebrae.

Mostly, have a wonderful Thanksgiving with family and friends. And give us a call at (508) 748-6632 if you stressed your spine during the holiday!

people here who have done many brilliant autistic things ... would have done the things they did without autism."

Therefore, a 'cure' for Chuck McIntyre would be a tragedy, indeed.

"You can have awareness without acceptance, and that happens to us..." said McIntyre. "You can be very aware of what a woman is... of what a transgender person is... but still don't accept them."

McIntyre would prefer society to focus more on making the environment we all share better for autistics and more accessible to the neuro-divergent rather than focusing on how to change the neuro-divergent to fit in with the 'neuro-typical' world.

"I am a person, not a 'puzzle,'" said McIntyre.

"And if I were a puzzle, I'm giving all of you a cheat code.

"We're not missing a 'piece,'" he continued.

"We're just so different (from each other as autistics) it's hard to figure out how to make this world accommodating and inclusive to us.

"My job is just to familiarize people with autism [and to] act more compassionate and be more prepared," said McIntyre.

McIntyre is an advocate for autism awareness and acceptance and a social activist dedicated to combatting racism, sexism, and the injustices of the world. He is a regular on ORCTV with his "The Human Truth Junior" series during which he reads and discusses children's books that promote tolerance and diversity. He is also Winters suggested his big idea about Marion withdrawing from the regional school district altogether, while Marion Town Administrator Jay McGrail expressed his big hopes about a potential new superintendent of schools.

McGrail reported on a recent Old Rochester Regional charter meeting he attended, and said the three towns would be looking to amend the regional school charter since years ago it was discovered that the charter had not been updated in roughly 20 years. One amendment could be the averaging of the student enrollment for each town to provide more stable and predictable school budget assessments from year to year, said McGrail.

"Even in the room there was back and forth as to whether average enrollment would help us, hurt us," said McGrail. It could help Marion, he said, especially when the new 40B is complete with its potential influx of ORR students.

Another possibility, said McGrail, would be establishing a capital revolving account within the ORR budget as part of the towns' assessments, which McGrail said would lead to some further "local control" over capital spending and, "In theory, it would make sense," he said.

One thing that school administration is not doing that is within the charter, Marion Selectman John Waterman said, is preparing financial statements on a regular and timely basis.

"They're not following what's in there from a financial perspective," said Waterman, "but I think we have to look at the whole thing."

Waterman referred to the years-old discussion on updating the outdated charter and said, "I think the whole thing's on the table."

That is when Winters suggested another option: "Another thing is getting out of the district.

"We obviously would be stuck with the debt, but I mean – that's a bargaining chip, too," said Winters.

"We're having enough problems getting out of the [Carver, Marion, Wareham Regional Refuse Disposal District]," said Waterman, clearly cautious of a second tandem Marion exit – 'Mexit' – from a regional entity.

"Well, that's the thing, you get stuck in these things and you can't get out," said Winters. "But I don't think forming our own high school..."

Winters interrupted Waterman, "No, it's not forming anything... it's giving kids the money to go somewhere else – paying them to send them to somewhere else."

Waterman clearly wasn't ready to adopt that approach. He stated that he would prefer to get more control over the district's spending "so they can't just send us a 5-percent budget increase," and suggested that the education budget should be extricated from the main town operating budget warrant article and stand alone in its own budget article, which is likely illegal, someone suggested.

"[Education is] 60 percent of our budget," said Waterman, "and if education is up 3 to 5 percent, that's often the toughest thing in our budget; but the public doesn't see that."

Waterman said perhaps this way the school district would have to ask for its own proposition 2 ½ override for a budget request that exceeds 2.5 percent in one year.

"The hard part right now is we're dealing with a lame duck superintendent that's got six months left until he's gone," said McGrail. "From the first time I met [Superintendent Doug White] to today, I'd say that the hope is – from our side – is that a new superintendent will change all of this for us, a new super that's a strong superintendent will lead us all in a [positive] direction..."

Earlier in the meeting, FinCom member Karen Kevelson announced her suspicion that the ORR deficit is even worse than what has been reported.

Kevelson told the committee that a "very credibly reliable" source suggested that the "200-and-some-thousand-dollar deficit is more closely like $500,000," as she put it.

"And this is through an extremely reliable source," Kevelson claimed, adding that she had recently spoken with Ed Swartz, a member of the Town of Dighton's Finance Committee, and quoted him as saying: "You could well be on the track of being like [Dighton-Rehoboth Regional High School], and you don't want to be like us."

Dighton-Rehoboth High School's woes include the threat of a state takeover of its financial management.

The next meeting of the Marion Finance Committee is tentatively scheduled for December 18 at 7:00 pm, location to be determined. The committee will also meet on January 15 at 7:00 pm at the Marion Police Station.

ZBA Votes 'No' to Bowman Road Solar Project

Mattapoisett Zoning Board of Appeals

By Marilou Newell

Residents of the Bowman Road neighborhood were few in number, but strong in their objections to a proposed solar farm planned on property owned by NextGrid, LLC, a California-based alternative energy developer, for acreage located off Bowman Road in undeveloped pine forest.

Coming before the Mattapoisett Zoning Board of Appeals on November 21 were Daniel Serber of NextGrid, LLC and engineer Richard Tabaczynski seeking a Special Permit and zoning use change for the purpose of constructing a 6-acre solar array.

The zoning district is currently designated as rural residential.

After a detailed presentation by Serber and Tabaczynski that included plans for protecting Bowman Road – an unpaved roadway – from heavy trucks, repairing the road as required, and using only two-axel vehicles in the construction zone, it was time to discuss stormwater drainage issues.

Voicing concerns that the site in question was in harm's way of a 100-year level hurricane was Mattapoisett Land Trust President. Michael Huguenin. He asked for financial assurance to fund repairs should the project negatively impact a brook running through the property.

"We want to put financial assurance in place so the town would have rapid access to money," said Huguenin, in the event the solar panels were damaged.

Serber assured all that NextGrid was willing to supply a surety or bond. Huguenin asserted that other solar farms in the community were not “in the middle of conservation lands.”

“Some [Mattapoissett Land Trust] members are for the project, and some are against,” said Huguenin, adding that the board of directors had discussed the possibility of building an observation deck on land trust property so that people could see the solar array, and as an educational tool for school-age children, calling it, “making lemonade out of lemons.”

Fellow land trust member Paul Osenkowski, however, was much more vehement in his assertion that the project did not belong on archeological and historical lands, saying, “I beseech you to stop this mania!”

ZBA Chairman Sue Akin said that housing could go on the property in question, and that such a project would require cutting down trees.

Osenkowski said he would rather have housing at that location than a solar farm.

Akin returned several times to the point that other solar farms in town had not created problems but, in fact, added to the town's revenue.

“That doesn't make it right,” Osenkowski said, indicating that profits generated from this project was money headed for California.

Debbie Freedman, of 3 Holly Woods Road, said that solar arrays were a form of “manufacturing” by turning sunlight into electricity. She thought that if this project were permitted, other forms of industry might be allowed in rural residential areas in the future.

On the topic of housing, Building Commissioner Andy Bobola said, “One thing that can happen is 40B (housing).” He said that if that came to pass, the town would not have any local control over the development.

Akin said that more housing meant more services that would impact the town's budget.

Becky Zora talked about her home located next to the proposed site, the care she had taken to preserve it, and her concern that the solar farm, which would be visible from her home, would devalue her property. She also spoke of the wildlife in the forest. She said that while she believes in the reality of climate change, “Why would this town ever consider allowing a residential use to become commercial?" She continued, "Housing doesn't scare me; you are opening this up to business."

Brad Hathaway, who has lived in the area since 1948, said, "When you bring industry into a rural zone, that is a crime." He also expressed concern over stormwater infiltrating the creek.

When it came time for the ZBA to cast its votes, it was clear that several members were not in favor of the petition.

"It doesn't seem appropriate for the area," ZBA member Tony Tranfaglia said.

Akin steadfastly held that this project wasn't "any different" than the array located on Crystal Springs Road.

"I'm on the Finance Committee... I'm open to industry," said ZBA member Colby Rottler. "I'm concerned about schools... but I don't feel this is appropriate."

ZBA member Norman Lyonnais said that the developer should have talked to the neighbors before buying the property.

Pacheco, Rottler, Tranfaglia, and Lyonnais voted to deny the Special Permit; Akin voted in favor.

The applicant has 20 days to appeal the decision in Superior Court.

Earlier in the evening, the ZBA granted a Special Permit to Keith McCown, 31 Pearl Street, for the construction of a 6-foot by 14-foot screened-in porch.

The next meeting of the Mattapoisett Zoning Board of Appeals will be held on January 16 at 6:00 pm if there are hearings scheduled. There is no meeting in December.

Trash District Option Could Prevent a Marion 'Mexit'

Carver, Marion, Wareham Regional Refuse Disposal District

By Andrea Ray

The Carver Marion Wareham Regional Refuse Disposal District will continue on in some form, board members made clear at the most recent meeting on November 20. The question members are facing now is, exactly what will the district look like?

"Stop calling it a dissolution," said board member and Marion Selectman Norm Hills. "There will still be something here come 2021 – whatever it is, but the district won't be entirely gone."

In fact, Carver, Marion, and Wareham will remain tied together for at least a little while, according to the district's attorney Thomas Crotty.

Crotty explained that, according to the current agreement, each town would remain responsible for ongoing liabilities, even if one or more of the towns should withdraw from the district.

The district is slated to take over two transfer stations – Benson Brook in Marion and the Route 28 transfer station in Rochester – beginning on January 1 of 2021, when SEMASS/Covanta financially exits the sites.

After reviewing different paths forward at the board members' request, Crotty recommended amending the current agreement and creating a 'skeletal' district as the simplest and quickest path forward.

A skeletal district, simply put, means that the district would cease to manage either the Benson Brook or the Rochester transfer station. Instead, it would be reduced to acting as an executive secretary and treasurer: collecting bills, keeping the books, and assessing costs back to each town on a regular basis.

According to the language of the agreement, approved in the 1970s, amendments can be added if voters at each town's Town Meeting approve them. The amendments, Crotty suggested, could allow for several possibilities. Among them are allowing certain towns to take over the management of individual transfer stations, providing a formula for cost allocations to each town, and drafting specific language for a town seeking withdrawal from the district.

That last amendment suggestion caught the ears of Marion representatives, as it would provide a clear path forward for withdrawal, as well as define Marion's responsibilities concerning ongoing liabilities.

Town Meeting voters of Marion recently voted in favor of a 'Mexit' from the CMWRRDD, and the Town of Marion recently filed a formal notice of withdrawal from the district with its objection to a decision to close the Benson Brook station in 2021.

"If a skeletal district is what we decide to do, I don't think Marion will pursue withdrawal," said Marion Town Administrator Jay McGrail. He noted a possible amendment to the current agreement, allocating sole responsibility for the management of Benson Brook to the Town of Marion.

"If there is an agreement to keep Benson Brook open, we need to know as soon as possible to inform our decisions," added Marion Selectman John Waterman, who attended the meeting as a non-CMWRRDD board member.

As the amendments would only need to be ratified by a town vote, Crotty said this path would also be the quickest. "If we move now, we could have an amendment on the agenda for spring town meetings. Any other agreement we try to make for these ongoing liabilities is going to require special legislation, and that will take years."

Carver and Wareham representatives agreed to take the options to their respective selectmen, but the lack of any visible progress frustrated some board members.

"A year ago, we were talking about what we needed to do; we're still talking about it," said Hills. "2021 is approaching quickly and we need a path to go forward. All we're doing here is rearranging deck chairs on the Titanic."

The next meeting of the Carver, Marion, Wareham Regional Refuse Disposal District has not yet been scheduled.

Minor Changes Approved to Bike Path Plan

Mattapoisett Conservation Commission

By Marilou Newell

A recent multi-agency meeting was held at the site of Phase 1B of the Mattapoisett bike path currently under construction along the barrier beach between Reservation Road and Goodspeed Island Road, which included members of the Massachusetts Department of Transportation, Department of Environmental Protection, and contractor D. W. White, said Mattapoisett Conservation Commission Chairman Mike King.

meeting, King said that the requested changes to the plan are necessary due to various survey errors, and the parties discussed measures to quantify the survey errors as well as measures to make corrections to the plan of record that will ultimately reflect the actual work that took place.

The first issue discussed was the need to construct concrete approaches to the railroad trestle bridge currently in place. The concrete ramps will provide the stability necessary to withstand heavy use and conform with the planned width of the roadway as it approaches the bridge.

Another change the group reviewed was a request by the contractors to use rubber mats to cover the entire space that will be crisscrossed in the marsh to drive pilings for the bike path bridge across the marshlands. The contractor proposed the concept of laying all the mats to the furthest point; then, as construction is completed, walk the mats back. This option allows the mats to be put in place once instead of constantly being placed, removed, and laid down in the next location.

"This will be much less disruptive to the wetlands," King explained.

The third and final change the group considered was the need to remove several stones from an old stone wall in the marsh. The commission concurred with the need to remove up to four stones. All changes to the plan of record were accepted and approved.

A public hearing was held for a Request for Determination of Applicability filed by David Monteiro for the expansion of an existing deck at 35 Mattapoisett Neck Road. The request received a Negative determination of applicability, allowing the project to move forward.

A Notice of Intent filed by Michael Ringuette for property located at the applicant's former marina was approved and conditioned, allowing for the repair of the septic system.

Continued hearings included an NOI filed by Nicholas Christy for the construction of a single-family home on a barrier beach located at 20 Howard Beach Road. The hearing had opened and closed at a previous meeting pending clarification that the lot was buildable. King said that Building Commissioner Andy Bobola indicated that the application would be acceptable in his purview if approved by the Conservation Commission, Planning Board, and Zoning Board of Appeals. The commission approved and conditioned the project.

Certificates of Compliance were issued to Connie Kearins, 35 Water Street; Christopher Querim, 5 Acushnet Road; and Francis and Maria Thorley, corner of Millbank Road, Noyes Avenue, and Byrne Avenue.

Requests for Extensions to Order of Conditions were granted to David McIntire for property located on Mahoney Lane; Jesse Davidson, 22 Pine Island Road; and for two lots located on Nantucket Drive owned by Brandt Point Builders, LLC, Armand Cortelleso.

OC Prepares for First Season Post-Jake Jason

High School Sports Update

By Nick Friar

Over the last four seasons, Old Colony basketball had the luxury of featuring Jake Jason on its roster. But now the wing has moved on to study at Bridgewater State University after graduating in the spring.

The Cougars also lost their second-best player in Zach Soucy, so Old Colony could easily set the bar low and call 2019-20 a rebuilding year. But Old Colony expects to maintain the same level of success.

"I feel like with the kids that I've got, there's no reason why we can't be in the hunt this year, next year and continuing to do big things," Old Colony basketball coach Matt Trahan said. "A lot of these guys, they played summer league and they've bought in and they know what it takes to be successful. So, I know they're going to work hard."

While their work ethic should maintain, in order for the Cougars to have success similar to that of past seasons, role players from the 2018-19 team – specifically Hunter Soares and Jo Jo Cortez – need to take a step forward. But Trahan doesn't necessarily expect those two to be the only ones who make up for Jason and Soucy's scoring.

"I think that the scoring is going to be a little more spread out," Trahan said. "Obviously, they've got to be buying to the defensive concept, as well. I'm pretty hopeful. I think the kids are ready to work."

Following their matchup on Thanksgiving Eve at Tri-County, Old Colony football will play in the Massachusetts Small Vocational Championship game on December 5.

Old Rochester Regional

Former Old Rochester Regional standout athlete Harry Smith carved out a greater role for himself on Southern Connecticut State University's football team in 2019.

Last season, played in eight of the Owls' 10 games. He registered 10 total tackles, three of which were solo. The outside linebacker also combined with one of his teammates on a sack, finishing with 0.5 in 2018.

Smith's sophomore season, however, has gone a bit differently. The Rochester native has played in each of Southern Connecticut State University's 10 games. He more than doubled his amount of total tackles (23), 14 of which were solo tackled. He finished with one sack on the season, but Smith also had 2.5 more tackles for loss.

The Owls improved to 4-6 in 2019 after going 2-8 in 2018.

Tabor Academy

Former Tabor Academy basketball standout and Mattapoisett native Noah Fernandes has begun his career with Division I Wichita State. The guard has appeared in four of the Shockers' first five games, with the one exception being their season-opening win over the University of Omaha.

Fernandes scored his first collegiate points in Wichita's win over UT Martin. It was a 3-point attempt. So far, he's 2-for-7 from the floor (2-for-5 from three) to start his career with the Shockers. He's also logged eight assists, six of which came in his 17-minute performance against Fernandes and the Shockers started the season with a five-game winning streak.

Dear Editor,

Appreciation goes out to the Mattapoisett Zoning Board of Appeals for their decision on Thursday, November 21, 2019 to deny the application to construct a solar panel array in a rural residential area off Bowman Road. There were numerous factors that had to be considered in their decision and I feel that the outcome is in the best interests of all the Mattapoisett residents and the harbor that we cherish. The brook that lies to the south of the proposed array empties into the bay under Angelica Ave. Cutting down the trees to erect such a facility would have compromised the ability of natural factors that filter the runoff that flows into the massive marsh on the north side of Angelica Ave. and then into the bay. This marsh is highly responsible for the clean water flowing into the harbor.

Efforts have been made for the past ten years to remove the refuse of a dumping ground which lies right next to the proposed area for the solar array. Along with the Town's foresight to provide proper sewerage disposal to the residents in this densely populated area and the ongoing efforts to restore the Grace Pond Preserve, oysters are now being cultivated by residents of Mattapoisett in the Pine Island Pond.

Mattapoisett Harbor is "Mattapoisett". It is the center of the hub in the place where we choose to reside. The Zoning Board of Appeals came through for us and protected this community in the absence of a protective by-law. A grateful population applauds their foresight. As the semi nomadic natives named it, Mattapoisett is "a good place to rest".

To the Editor:

In a November 21 Wanderer story about Tabor Academy's petition to the ZBA for field lights, the reporter quoted me saying something negative about Tabor headmaster John Quirk. I never made those comments. I never would make those comments. They were made by another attendee sitting next to me.

The reporter was sitting a row ahead of me at the meeting and never turned around to see who had spoken and never asked me about the comments.

Wanderer Editor Paul Lopes has acknowledged the reporter's mistake and promised it will be corrected (the offensive comment has been removed from the online story), but I worry that isn't enough. In my short time in Marion, I have worked to contribute to our community, including serving on the ZBA from 2015 until earlier this year. I strive to be thorough, impartial, informed and,

Sippican Historical Society

In 1998, the Sippican Historical Society commissioned an architectural survey of Marion's historic homes and buildings. The survey was funded half by the Sippican Historical Society and half by the Massachusetts Historical Commission. Due to the limits of funding, not all of the historic buildings were surveyed, but over 100 were cataloged and photographed. The results of the survey are in digital form on the Massachusetts Historical Commission's website and in four binders in the Sippican Historical Society's office (and at the Marion Town Clerk's office).

Marion (Old Rochester) is one of the oldest towns in the United States, and the Sippican Historical Society maintains an extensive collection of documentation on its historic buildings. The Sippican Historical Society will preview one building a week so that the residents of Marion can understand more about its unique historical architecture.

This installment features 62 Pleasant Street. Carpenter Augustus Handy bought the land at 62 Pleasant Street in 1853 and, with Noah Handy, built this house the following year. In 1879, this property was owned by the estate of Augustus Handy. In the early 1900s, Handy's daughter, Priscilla Handy Hadley, lived here with her husband, Peleg Hadley. Priscilla and Peleg Handy were married in 1877. Peleg Hadley was the son of Andrew Hadley, the proprietor of the Marion General Store. Peleg Hadley initially worked in his father's store, later establishing a poultry business. He served as town auditor and selectman. He died in this house on July 17, 1931, at age 82.

SLT Post-Thanksgiving Dog Walk

The Sippican Lands Trust invites your pooch(es) and you for our annual Post-Thanksgiving Dog Walk on Sunday, December 1 at 1:00 pm at our White Eagle property (part of Aucoot Woods).

All dogs and owners are welcome. Dogs must be leashed and under their owner's control at all times. Your canine companion(s) and you can walk off some of those extra treats from Thanksgiving and enjoy a late fall walk at SLT's 248-acre White Eagle property.

Animal Advice

Jay Gould, DVM

My dog's breath is pretty bad. Is there something I can feed him to make it smell better?

Elevate your dogs' upper lip and look at his molars. They should be white and shiny. If they look brown near the gums you should schedule an appointment with your veterinarian to discuss a dental cleaning. Dirty teeth and the infected gums that usually come with them, often cause a foul odor, pain and the potential for tooth loss. Every time your dog chews he may cause a bacterial shower into his blood stream which can affect his heart valves, kidneys and other organs. Have the teeth cleaned and discuss ways to prevent dental disease in the future.

You can contact Dr. Gould at 508-758-6400 or visit our website at MattapoisettAH.com

The 248-acre White Eagle property supports a rich diversity of habitats including upland pine, mixed hardwood forest, shrub and wooded swamp, freshwater marsh and cranberry bogs.

The White Eagle property and surrounding land make up a 482-acre contiguous parcel of land that is home to several rare and threatened species including the Eastern Box Turtle, the Spotted Turtle and the Water-willow Stem Borer.

White Eagle is located off of Route 6 in Marion. Turn onto Parlowtown Road across from the town cemetery and follow road until you reach the cul-de-sac. Veer left onto the dirt road and follow past an abandoned cranberry bog on your right. The dirt road is bumpy so please use caution when driving down dirt road. Parking is available directly past the bog and along the dirt roadside. The kiosk is a short walk beyond.

The walk is free, and no registration is required. Please dress appropriately for the day's weather and please bring water for your canine companion(s) and you. Only the worst weather will cancel an SLT walk. If a walk is canceled, then information will be posted to SLT's website and Facebook page. For directions or further information visit sippicanlandstrust.org or call Sippican Lands Trust at 508-748-3080.

Local Girl Gives Gift of Warmth for the Season

Hanna Whalley of Mattapoisett, an eighth-grader at Old Rochester Junior High School, initiated and organized a coat drive that led to the collection of over 200 jackets and coats for distribution to the homeless in the greater New Bedford area.

Whalley said she was inspired by her father who has been volunteering on the Salvation Army Canteen food truck and told her stories about people who came to get food.

"Many of them lived on the street or a car or some basic shelter, yet they did not have any warm clothes," said Whalley. "That's when I decided to approach my school's principal, Mr. Coellner, to see if he would support a coat drive at our school."

Whalley asked her mom to also reach out to Mrs. Bowman at Center and Old Hammondtown Schools where Whalley attended in prior years, "And they said yes right away," said Whalley. Then, Whalley's father contacted several key people at the Salvation Army who helped coordinate the distribution of all the collected coats.

"It was incredible to see this 13-year-old girl stand up and say: 'I want to do something good, but I need help,' and all these people immediately respond: 'Yes, we will support you,'" said Whalley's mother, Monika.

Everyone worked as a team, from the principals who sent reminders out to the students, the secretaries who kept in touch with the Whalleys about coat drop-offs, and the teachers – some of who were coat donors themselves – that encouraged the students to participate.

"We even heard a rumor about homework passes for students who remember to bring in a coat," Monika Whalley said.

The rest of the team – the community – responded with open hearts and, in just one short week, donated over 200 pieces of clothing.

It took two cars to haul the coats over to the Salvation Army.

Whalley said her effort made her feel "very happy" and she is overjoyed with the outcome.

"People couldn't believe that we got so many coats in such a short time," Whalley said. "It showed me that there is a lot of good among people and that one person can make a difference."

The used coats were distributed on Sunday, November 24, following a meal that serves the homeless and needy at the Salvation Army in New Bedford. There were some new coats with the tags still on, and these will be used for the Neediest Families Fund, a collaboration project.

Whalley said it felt "amazing" when she received some news on the people who received one of the coats generously donated by the people of Tri-Town and delivered by Whalley's family.

"They were all very grateful," said Whalley. "My dad told me that there was a couple who live in a tent. It was raining all day on Sunday and their tent got wet, but at least they had warm dry clothes to sleep in."

Whalley said she would like to organize another drive in the near future with a focus on personal hygiene. In the meantime, Whalley will be out in the area ringing the bell for the Salvation Army donations with her parents.

"And I am planning to go out on a food truck again with my dad," she said.

Whalley hopes the generous spirit of the season will spread further, and encourages us all to participate in programs specific to the holidays such as "Adopt a Family", and there is a never-ending need for non-perishable food items for the pantry that supplies the meals served by Salvation Army and the Mobile Ministries.

For specific information, those interested can contact the Salvation Army directly at 508-997-6561.

O'Rourke was the winner of the 19th Suncheon Nam Seung-ryong Marathon on November 10 that took place in Suncheon, about 1.5 hours by bus from Julia's current residence in the city of Mokpo.

She ran the race with several other Fulbright Fellows from all over the United States currently teaching in various locations in South Korea.

Julia's time was 1:30:36.71 – a 6:54 mile pace – which is Julia's best half-marathon time out of the few she has run.

"She told me that she was calculating her split per kilometer during the race and didn't really process that she was running sub-7 minute pace," said Barbara Dadagian, O'Rourke's grandmother. "She told me she hadn't been able to train as hard as she normally would due to her schedule."

Julia left for South Korea in July of 2019, and will return in July 2020. She plans to run another half-marathon with her friend, Hannah, another Fulbright Fellow, in December. Then, she and Hannah hope to run

John Dawson, 85, a longtime resident of Boxford, currently of Mattapoisett, died on November 21, 2019. He was the devoted husband of Elizabeth A. (Jaillet) Dawson for 56 years. Born in Brooklyn, NY and raised in Brooklyn, New Bedford and Fairhaven, he was the son of the late James J. and Mary Margaret (Gathral) Dawson. John graduated from Holy Family High School in New Bedford and earned a Bachelor of Science in civil engineering from Northeastern University in 1958. He went on to serve three years with the Army and remained a reservist until 1964. John returned to Northeastern University and earned a Master of Science in structural engineering in 1963.

John and Elizabeth were married in July of 1963 and made their home in Manchester, CT where John worked for Pratt & Whitney. They relocated to Saugus and eventually settled in Boxford where John designed and built their home and worked for General Electric in Lynn as a mechanical engineer in the jet engine division. While raising six children, he volunteered countless hours for the Boxford Athletic Association coaching soccer and baseball and organizing road races, as well as volunteering for St. Rose of Lima church in Topsfield. John worked for General Electric for 38 years where he authored numerous patents for jet engine parts and was active in the Elfun Society. In Remembrance

Donald "Nick" Nahigyan

March 9, 1950 – November 6, 2019

Remembering one of Mattapoisett's own sons as he has passed through our streets and into the arms of his Maker. In life, Donald pondered over every local obituary in remembrance of the life lived. Now we reflect upon his, if only in part.

Possessing exemplary intellect, wit and compassion, Donald humbly and gracefully faced the severest of challenges in life; indeed, he was a man of faith, a man of prayer, a man of quiet courage.

A lover of nature and all of God's little creatures, Donald was closely attuned to the rhythms of the earth and skies and he loved sharing his findings with you. He was wonderfully contemplative.

We will always remember the music of his hands and heart at his piano keyboard. Bach, Beethoven, Chopin, Brahms and Schumann brought to our ears with the skill and mastery of a concert pianist! Donald will never be forgotten. He will remain in our hearts, and his music will continue to be heard in our minds' ear, especially up and down little Randall Road.

God rest your soul, Donald.

MOVIE REVIEW

The Monitor

By Rob Gonsalves
www.robsmovievault.com

Recorder: The Marion Stokes Project. A documentary directed by Matt Wolf. Running time: 88 minutes. No MPAA rating. Playing at the Museum of Fine Art in Boston November 29 - December 5.

About an hour into the documentary Recorder: The Marion Stokes Project comes the moment we've been dreading. Here, though, the moment is presented much differently, due to the movie's subject. Marion Stokes (1929-2012) was a former librarian whose second husband was wealthy, so she had a lot of time and resources to spend 35 years — 1977 to 2012 — recording every TV news channel 24/7. In this way she filled hundreds and hundreds of videotapes with local (Philadelphia) as well as national news. At 8:49 on the morning of September 11, 2001, Marion's VCRs were running as usual, and we see a grid of four screens simultaneously showing puff pieces or morning filler. CNN, on the top left, is the first to cover the developing catastrophe, and for a long time the other three screens keep showing their unimportant things. Then ABC breaks into Good Morning America to weigh in. Then CBS. Then, finally, the Fox affiliate.

Recorder is the story of, as the film admits, a hoarder — a type not unknown on the library beat — who amassed information. Marion Stokes, an African-American woman, had seen a lot in her time. Fired from her library job for associating with communists, she took to local TV to participate in discussions with all sorts of people. She didn't trust any one news outlet to deliver the truth, so she started tracking them all — which at first, with only three networks, was easy. This media junkie, described by everyone in this film who knew her as brilliant, was saving all of this for posterity. At the end, when the Internet Archive comes to the rescue and takes a truckload of tapes off her son's hands, we sigh in relief — Marion's work of 35 years is going to someone who knows what to do with it.

Of course, Marion's work is useful beyond simply archiving the news. She also captured a great deal of pop culture, if only by osmosis through commercials. I know someone, who goes by the handle the Internet Lurker, who has a YouTube channel dedicated to TV ads he has extracted from old videotapes: anytime someone recorded a movie or sports event off of TV but wasn't motivated to hit "pause" during the commercials, an inadvertent record was made of a time and place. A good deal of knowledge may be gleaned from observing how 7-Up, say, thought it most efficient to get us to buy their soda in 1987. The hairdos and fashion are a side benefit (and, often, a hoot), but the history of advertising in the late 20th century will be written with help from collections like the Internet Lurker's — or Marion Stokes'.

The movie is far from a hoarder-wonk's daydream, though. Its main focus, as established by director Matt Wolf, is to paint this one eccentric, often prickly woman as a keeper of the flame of truth. Marion was already in her thirties during the Civil Rights era, and knew firsthand the importance of questioning what the largely white male establishment told you was news, or not news, and how it told you that. (For the second time in a recent documentary about news, Phil Donahue turns up — here, it's to make the same point about that establishment.) The only way to study bias in reporting, especially since the networks themselves couldn't be counted on to archive their own daily output, was to document it relentlessly. When cable came in, and Marion found herself tracking C-SPAN and CNN and MSNBC and CNBC, it's hard to imagine whether she felt overwhelmed or elated by the thrill of the chase.

In the footage we see here, Marion has a streak of stereotype about her — the enormously intelligent but irascible person who isn't having your nonsense, African-American female division. (See also: Maxine Waters.) She could easily have held her own against William F. Buckley on Crossfire if she hadn't decided to move from the camera eye to a chair at one of her nine properties. Sitting in front of countless monitors, she in effect became a monitor, as well — a brain taking in data and processing it. But what insight did she gain? Her main concern, we understand, was to save the news from disappearing. But she couldn't have had time to watch all those tapes herself, not when the next day would bring yet more things to record. The subtle point of the movie is that she squirreled away data she couldn't possibly have viewed, for the benefit of unseen, unknown others. And this is not an altogether happy portrait: as a reward for all her dedication, in December 2012, Marion Stokes left consciousness while footage from the Sandy Hook massacre soaked all our TVs in the blood of children. Recorder doesn't try to flip that into something positive, and I won't try either.

SALOME'S STARS

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) While it seems that chaos is taking over, you get everything back to normal, even if it means being more than a little assertive with some people. Expect to hear more job-related news soon.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Expect to be able to move ahead with your workplace plans now that you have a good idea of what you might have to face. You also can anticipate a welcome change on the home front.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A quieter period settles in, giving you a chance to catch your breath, as well as allowing for more time to handle some important family matters. The arts dominate this weekend. Enjoy them.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) The frustrations of last week have pretty much played themselves out. You should find things going more smoothly, especially with those all-important personal matters.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Once again, you find a creative way to resolve a pesky problem in short order. However, a matter involving a possible breach of confidence might need a bit more time to check out.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Reuniting with an old friend could lead to the sharing of some great new experiences. But be careful you don't find yourself once again being super-critical or overly judgmental.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You should be seeing some positive results following your move toward repairing that unraveling relationship. There might be some setbacks, but staying with it ultimately pays off.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Encouraging a friendlier environment in the home could go a long way to help dissipate anger and resolve problems, especially those affecting children. It won't be easy, but you can do it.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A recent act of kindness is beginning to show some unexpected (but very welcome) results. On another note, expect to hear more about a possible move to another locale.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The good news is that the sure-footed Goat can rely on his or her skill to get around obstacles in the workplace. The not-so-good news is that new impediments could turn up later.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A change of pace is welcome but also confusing. Before you make decisions one way or another, be sure you know precisely what it is you're being asked to do.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Don't fret if you don't get the gratitude you think you're owed for doing a nice thing for someone. There might be a good reason for that. In any event, what's important is that you did it.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of making the sort of wise decisions that ultimately shed new light on dark situations.

I Found the Aardvark!

Each week, hidden somewhere in the pages of The Wanderer is a tiny drawing of an aardvark. The little guy you are looking for looks exactly like the one pictured above (but don't put down this page as your answer, there's another one hidden somewhere in this issue).

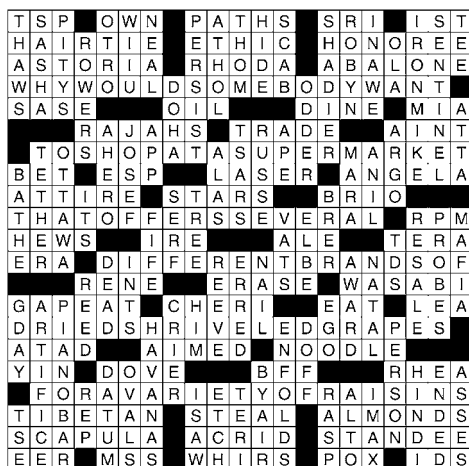

Once you find the aardvark you can submit your answer online and if you are right you will get Aardvark Points! You can then use these points to get cool Aardvark Prizes!

To enter visit: www.wanderer.com and Click on I Found the Aardvark

In the November 21, 2019 edition the Aardvark was on page 46!
